

CYANIDE VOGUE

Cyanide Vogue is a band out of San Diego, making a dirty new style of Rock and Roll. They have played several venues throughout the coastal and east San Diego County region and have received airplay on local stations, including Rock 105.3. Cyanide Vogue, rather than focusing on being a studio band, aims to put on a great live show. Combining blues, rock and punk, they put on a high-energy performance which is both exciting and memorable.

Cyanide Vogue is a power trio, with Nate Alan on guitar and Vocals, Keith Kaonis on drums and Mark Roberts on bass. The three come together to create a powerful sound that always draws a crowd. Each of the members has a unique background that works in symphony with the others to create a distinct dynamic.

Nate Alan has a long history in the San Diego music scene, playing in bands varying from heavy metal to blues. His first band, Joe Nasty, saw some local success and many other projects were made to be one-offs for the enjoyment of the musicians and the crowd alike. Keith Kaonis played with punk bands Meatwagon and GSS for many years, touring throughout the southwest US. Mark grew up in the United Kingdom and cut his teeth on British punk and rock. He moved to the US and joined a local hard rock group. Shortly after Mark's tenure in his first state-side band, he joined Cyanide Vogue.

Cyanide Vogue is going in to 2010 with enthusiasm and an eye to reach new fans and friends alike. They are in the process of recording an album and booking tour dates for the new season. For more info & booking Email:

info@cyanidevogue.com

Phone: (619) 928-4081 Official Website: www.cyanidevogue.com

Social:

◆ Copyright 2009-2010. All rights reserved.